

Scenario: In a contract, a party is required to perform a certain act. The party fails to do so, and the other party suffers a loss. The party who failed to perform is liable for the loss. This is an example of a contract that is enforceable under the law.

Question: Which of the following is a contract that is enforceable under the law?

Options: A. A contract that is made between two parties who are not of legal age. B. A contract that is made between two parties who are not of legal age and who are not of legal capacity. C. A contract that is made between two parties who are of legal age and who are of legal capacity. D. A contract that is made between two parties who are of legal age and who are not of legal capacity.

Answer: C. A contract that is made between two parties who are of legal age and who are of legal capacity.

Explanation: A contract is a legally enforceable agreement between two or more parties. For a contract to be enforceable, the parties must be of legal age and of legal capacity. A contract made between two parties who are not of legal age or who are not of legal capacity is not enforceable under the law.
